

Jennifer Beals had the coolest loft — you can too with this door track

Do you dream of living in an authentic loft like Jennifer Beals did in Flashdance? If so, the details make all the difference. Don't install a cheap off-the-rack hardware store door and be done with it. To get the true, gritty look that shows you're not messing around, choose exposed hardware. Burlington-based KN Crowder manufacturing has launched a round track that's just the ticket. It's pictured with a walnut door from Italdoor (italdoor.com) with stainless steel inlays and handle from Standard Metal (smhardware.com); price as shown is $5,000. A Crowder rep says the new track is the result of the increasing trend towards the industrial look in interiors. (The company also carries other cool door solutions, including bar applications.) The track moves smoothly, has a high-load capacity, is noiseless and easy to install. For info, visit kncrowder.com. National Post
